The Council confirms that it has holds correspondence relating to your request.

The correspondence is withheld as it constitutes personal information as defined in Article 4 (1) of the UK GDPR.

In considering the exemption for personal data under s 40(2) of the Freedom of Information Act, we need to consider whether disclosure of personal information would contravene any of the data protection principles.

The Data Protection Principles state that personal information must be processed lawfully and fairly and for specified purposes. This information is held by the council as correspondence with us. The data subject would not have an expectation that this information would be publicly disclosed, and therefore any disclosure would be unfair and in breach of the data protection principles.

The identity of these individuals is therefore exempt from disclosure under s 40(2) of the Freedom of Information Act. This is an absolute exemption and there is no requirement to consider the public interest.
